

At last they found Sally's house.
"Mew, mew," said Puff.
Out came Dick and Jane.
Out came Mother, too.
"Thank you!" she said to Big Bill.
"You found our little lost girl!
You found our Baby Sally!"

"No, no," laughed Sally.
"I found Big Bill.
I found a good friend."

Under the Big Umbrella

"See it rain!" said Mother.
"Here is my new umbrella.
You can walk under it to school."

Dick said, "Oh, Mother, I must walk to school with Peter and Ellen.

They do not know the way to school.
They do not know which way to go.
Let Jane take your new umbrella.
Good-by, Mother! Good-by!"

Jane said, "Look, Mother!
I see Father's big umbrella.
It is fun to walk under it
in the rain.

Please let me take it.
Please say yes."

"Father's umbrella is too big for one little girl," said Mother.

"But I will say yes.

Take the big umbrella and have fun in the rain."

Splash, splash came the rain.
Down on the street.
Down on the walk.
Down on Jane's umbrella.
What fun it was to walk
in the rain!

Splash, splash, splash went Jane
under the big umbrella.

Then she ran into a boy and a girl.
Bump! Bump!

Jane said, "Oh, what a bump!
I did not see you.
Who are you?"

The boy laughed and said,
"We are Jim and Patty.
We are on our way to school."

"So am I, Jim," said Jane.
"Please let me walk to school with you and Patty.
My name is Jane."

Then the rain came down fast.
Jane saw it splash on Jim.
She saw it splash on Patty.
"Come, Patty and Jim," she said.
"Get under my umbrella with me."
"My, my!" said Jim.
"What a big umbrella!"
"Yes, it is big," said Jane.
"It is too big for me.
But it is not too big for three."
